INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE AND POLICY

The Company invests in cash-generative quoted UK Small and Mid-Cap Companies that are expected to grow faster than the UK stock market as a whole over the long term and which can finance their own organic growth.

The Company's objective is to outperform the UK equity market by investing in companies with higher-than-average earnings growth that are listed outside the top 100 stocks on either of the Main Market, AQSE or traded on AIM, to capture the smaller companies' outperformance effect. The Investment Manager believes the investment trust structure of the Company lends itself to investing in smaller, more illiquid growth stocks, as the closed-end structure removes the potential scenario where the Company needs to sell holdings at the wrong time to meet redemptions.

The Company principally invests (approximately 75 per cent of its funds) in shares of companies which are listed on the Main Market or AQSE or traded on AIM, with market capitalisations of less than £250 million. The Company also invests (approximately 25 per cent of its funds) in some UK listed companies with larger market capitalisations, for liquidity purposes.

MONTHLY MANAGER COMMENTARY

Another turbulent month for financial markets, with Trump's "Liberation Day" tariff announcement being far more draconian than any commentators had expected, sending the market into freefall, only for them to rally a few days later with the announcement of a 90 day suspension beyond a 10% base tariff for trading partners, with the exception of China, Canada and Mexico and specific sectors like steel, aluminium and automobiles. The main impact of the US administration's tariff regime and constant changes in policy to date has been the dampening effect it has had on business confidence, with companies pausing investment plans until the eventual trading landscape becomes clearer, in turn prompting a slowdown in economic activity. Our main take-away is that tariffs will be inflationary in the USA, where it will be difficult to replace complex supply chains built up over many years, with companies having to pass on additional costs via price rises, restricting the Fed's room for manoeuvre in reducing interest rates. Conversely, manufacturers in low-cost centres will be looking to other markets for their products, which coupled with a more general economic slowdown could prove deflationary in other developed markets, enabling faster rate cuts in economies like the UK.

This message has started to resonate in UK mid and small cap markets, which despite the alarming headline news, managed a positive return in April, as UK domestic earners started to rally, with Gamma Communications and On The Beach performing well in the Trust. Even AIM stocks, such as DotDigital, staged a rally after a prolonged period of underperformance caused by worries over their diminished IHT sheltering status. This rally may have been helped by technical factors, as AIM IHT managers recycle Trusts held in some larger stocks, like Gamma Communications, which are migrating to the Main List, into remaining relatively illiquid AIM listed candidates.

Given the modest rally in Small and Mid-cap and AIM stocks, the Trust's negative return for the month was disappointing, and can be put down to the following reasons. Firstly, given its Growth mandate, the Trust is underweight UK domestic cyclical names, which performed well in April as investors sought out exposure to stocks likely to benefit from rate cuts. Furthermore, we also saw poor performance from a number of our growth stocks whose growth rate might be moderated by current economic uncertainty, particularly in the USA. This drove underperformance from GB Group, System1 and Celebris. The Trust's worst contributor was RWS, which despite a pick-up in sales growth, warned on profits yet again, this time as it experienced problems migrating two large translation customers onto a more automated delivery model.

It's interesting to note that, having seen some potential PE bids fall away at the start of the month given heightened uncertainty (notably Advanced Medical Solutions), towards the end of the month, bid activity has resurfaced with approaches for two of the Trust's largest holdings, namely Alpha Group International from a US trade buyer and with GlobalData seeing approaches from two PE buyers.

Risk Factors

The value of investments and the income from them may go down as well as up and you may not get back your original investment. "Investment trusts can borrow money to make additional investments on top of shareholders funds (gearing), however, this is investment trust does not currently use any gearing. An investor could lose all of their capital. Smaller companies are riskier and less liquid than larger companies which means their share price may be more volatile. Some of the annual management fee is currently charged to the capital of the Fund. Whilst this increases the yield, it will restrict the potential for capital growth. The level of yield may be subject to fluctuation and is not guaranteed. Net Asset Value ("NAV") performance is not the same as share price performance and investors may not realise returns the same as NAV performance.
